A Live Character Interaction
Storytelling Experience
Show Writer: Corey Clancy

CONCEPT

Come explore the story of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano through a live character interaction storytelling experience where Prince Amore will bring you through his love story that brought color to an otherwise dull kingdom.

Travelers will be able to play parts in the story Amore Colorato alongside Prince Amore and Alessi the Narwhal, culminating in the absolute celebration of love: marriage. This theme park experience is sure to remind children and adults of all ages that it is okay to be themselves and love whom they want to love.

BACKSTORY: Amore Colorato ("Colorful Love")

Prince Amore ("love") is a young royal who wishes to live in a world where people love him for who he truly is. Prince Amore, his narwhal friend Alessi ("defender"), and his royal family live in an unhappy, dull, colorless black-and-white kingdom in Italy named Incolore ("colorless"). When the King's and Queen's citizens threaten a rebellion if happiness cannot be found, Prince Amore sneaks out to seek help from the other lands. Amore and Alessi venture by boat outside their home to meet with other members of the elite to learn how they can bring happiness and joy to their people.

Amore and Alessi set off and arrive to Terra dei Ricci ("Land of the Rich") where they encounter Prince Ricco ("rich") who empathizes with their situation and suggests that happiness is found in having an abundance of wealth and riches. Ricco offers a trade: he will provide wealth and riches to Incolore in exchange for a large supply of servants and laborers. Appalled by this proposition, Prince Amore realizes that he cannot take advice from a prince who enslaves members of society and relies solely on wealth for happiness. Prince Ricco proceeds to try to capture Amore and Alessi, who must escape.

Frantically sailing away, Amore and Alessi head to their next stop in Mezzo Rengo ("half kingdom"). They meet Princess Cattiva ("evil") who suggests that the way to find happiness is by decreasing the number of people to rule over. She explains that all those who do not contribute to the success of the royal family of Incolore should be banished. Prince Amore responds with disgust and questions Cattiva's intentions. Cattiva decides that Amore and Alessi must be banished immediately for their disrespect toward her ruling techniques and sends some of her knights to exile them.

Prince Amore and Alessi escape for their lives and sail to their final stop, Luminescenza ("luminescence"). Here, the happiest and most vibrant villagers welcome the duo and introduce them to the handsome and charming Prince Luciano ("shining light"). Luciano explains that the only way people can truly be happy is if they are loved and allowed to be themselves. Luciano grabs Amore's hand and transfers a glimpse of color to Amore's black-and-white body. Awoken by Prince Luciano, Prince Amore feels that he can be his true, colorful self and knows what the key to happiness is. Never has he felt more himself than with Prince Luciano.

Returning home to Incolore, the King notices Prince Amore has a new underlying tint of color and worries this is a sign of rebellion, unable to believe Amore's newfound knowledge that Incolore's people are not happy because he has not allowed them to "be themselves." The King locks Amore away in the castle tower so that he may not stir up a rebellion.

Alarmed, Alessi swims back to Luminescenza to obtain the help of Prince Luciano. Luciano and several of his villagers make their way to Incolore to bring color to the kingdom, making the King and Queen nervous that this is the rebellion their people threatened. Sending an army of guards, a battle breaks out.

Prince Luciano hurries to save Prince Amore from the tower, who is shocked that someone would care so much to come save him. They run into the land to hold hands with all of the people to help bring out their true colorful selves, transferring love, authenticity, and acceptance to all.

Amidst the battle, the Queen notices that her kingdom's people are happier and calls for the guards to stop. She, just like Prince Amore, just wants her people to be happy and proud to live in Incolore. She decides to accept all citizens of the kingdom with her open arms, especially her son.

The Queen shows the King how happy and colorful their people are, and he refuses to accept it, until Amore comes up to him with Luciano. Amore says,

"Father...you have to believe that acceptance of otherness works...Father...I have finally found who I am, and I am so much happier. Who I am...is in love with Luciano."

Luciano walks over to Amore, and kisses him, transforming Amore into the most colorful human being possible.

"See Dad...see what true love and acceptance does?"

The King approaches Amore aggressively when he surprisingly gives him the biggest hug, assuring him and the kingdom that they will love and accept everyone as they are for the rest of time! Happiness and color have been restored to the kingdom, and love wins once again! The kingdom Incolore ("colorless") will now be forever known as Colorato ("colorful").

GUEST EXPERIENCE: La Celebrazione Dell'amore Colorato ("The Celebration of Colorful Love")

Travelers enter a coast side Italian castle to join Prince Amore and Prince Luciano, who are getting ready to celebrate La Celebrazione Dell'amore Colorato ("The Celebration of Colorful Love"). Today is the anniversary of the day the royal pair fell in love and turned the city of Incolore into Colorato through their act of true love.

To celebrate the occasion, Travelers are invited to the wedding of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano! Before the celebration can begin, Travelers are welcome to hear the tale of the lovers and play out parts of the story while the ballroom is being decorated.

After roles and parts are assigned to the Travelers inside the castle, they are brought outside to the castle's private beach where Prince Amore, Alessi the Narwhal, and some of the kingdom's Royal Apprentices await them to act out the story of Amore Colorato.

Using props and costumes, Travelers experience and act out Amore's journey from Incolore to Terra dei Ricci, Mezzo Rengo, Luminescenza, and ultimately, Colorato.

Prince Amore leaves the storytelling experience early to prepare for the royal ceremony, and Alessi swims in to fulfill his role. When the tale is told, the Travelers make their way into the main ballroom of the castle for the wedding of Prince Luciano and Prince Amore.

After the ceremony, the journey concludes with Travelers taking their photos with Prince Amore and Prince Luciano before leaving the castle full of love and acceptance.

Treatment

Scene 1: The Cortile ("Courtyard") Waiting Area

Travelers to La Celebrazione Dell'amore Colorato ("The Celebration of Colorful Love") have come to the kingdom of Colorato to celebrate the first anniversary of the day Prince Amore and Prince Luciano brought color to the kingdom of Incolore and transformed it to Colorato. All are invited to commemorate this day through an act of true celebration and love: the wedding of Prince Amore of Colorato and Prince Luciano of Luminescenza.

Travelers make their way to Castello Colorato and hear the crashing of waves and faint sounds of music and celebration. They cross a tan bridge made of stone and colorful tiles with beautiful, ornate columns on each side suspending over the clearest blue water. Atop the columns leading to the end of the bridge are statues of the royal figures of the city of Colorato, including Prince Amore, Prince Luciano, Alessi the Italian Narwhal, and the King and Queen.

Drawing closer to the sounds of celebration, Travelers approach the end of the bridge, where there lies an arch that vaguely resembles a rainbow and leads into the Cortile ("Courtyard") of Castello Colorato. Hanging from the arch is a beautiful banner that says "Benvenuti alla Celebrazione Dell'amore Colorato e al Nozze del Principe Amore e del Principe Luciano"

(“Welcome to the Celebration of Colorful Love and the Wedding of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano”).

While Travelers await their turn to venture into the Castello Colorato, ROYAL APPRENTICES in beachy, Italian royal wardrobe welcome the Travelers in the Cortile and ask for their help to make decorations for the celebration and the wedding of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano. They invite Travelers to engage in a variety of colorful and artistic activities, including painting colorful flowers, creating art to be hung in the Royal Ballroom, and making celebratory kites to fly above the town. The Royal Apprentices also want to make sure the Travelers are prepared for the celebration’s proceedings and offer Travelers the chance to learn the tunes of Colorato and engage in the traditional celebratory dances of the kingdom.

When everyone has gathered in the Cortile and the Royal Apprentices deem the time is right, the Travelers are welcomed into the Lobby of the Castello Colorato (“Colorful Castle”).

Scene 2: The Castello Colorato (“Colorful Castle”) Lobby

Travelers enter the Sammezzano-Castle-inspired, Castello Colorato, whose façade is adorned with colorful tiles and a central mosaic of the sun emanating colorful rays of sunshine. Led inside the Castello by the Royal Apprentices, Travelers enter the flamboyantly decorated main lobby where they run into a barefoot PRINCE AMORE wearing tan trousers, a loose tan knit polo, and a crown half falling off of his head.

The Royal Apprentices stop Prince Amore and let him know that these Travelers have come for the big celebration, but they need a refresher on the details of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano’s love story. Wanting to share the inspirational story of remaining true to yourself and your love to all, Prince Amore invites the guests outside to the beach where Alessi the Narwhal will help him tell his true love story while Prince Luciano finishes wedding preparations.

But first, since everyone else in the kingdom is busy preparing for the royal affair, Prince Amore needs the help of the Travelers to tell his love story. The Royal Apprentices and Prince Amore cast the key roles of his story to the Travelers, and props and costumes are given to those chosen to play the roles of Prince Luciano, the King and the Queen of Incolore/Colorato, Prince Ricco of Terra dei Ricci, and Princess Cattiva of Mezzo Rengo. Travelers not cast in these roles are also given the options to play a variety of inanimate objects and props or create sound effects and body movements to influence the environment; therefore, all are welcome to join in the tale!

With the roles of the story cast, Prince Amore and the Royal Apprentices are ready to go to the beach to join Alessi’s story time...except, to tell the story from the beginning, the setting must be accurate. The Travelers must go back in time to the kingdom of Incolore before color was brought to the kingdom. Opening a castle door out to the beach, the Travelers, Prince Amore, and the Royal Apprentices enter a black-and-white beach setting where they see a projection of Amore’s best friend, ALESSI the Italian Narwhal, awaiting them. Sound is muffled in this room, and light waves can be heard around Alessi’s projection.

Scene 3: Alessi's Storytelling Spiaggia ("Beach")

Walking onto the beach, Travelers see a variety of wooden shipwrecked benches sitting atop warm sand in front of a projection of the ocean, where Alessi the Italian Narwhal is swimming and greeting the Travelers. Prince Amore invites the Travelers into the completely black and white setting, and Travelers notice that through impressive lighting techniques, they too have turned black and white.

Alessi and Prince Amore tell the tale of Prince Amore and Prince Luciano's love story, incorporating the Travelers who have been cast in certain roles in the story. The Royal Apprentices stand on the side and help prompt the acting Travelers when it is their turn, taking everyone on a journey to find the secret to bringing color back to the kingdom of Incolore.

Alessi and Amore take the Travelers through the kingdom of Incolore, to Prince Ricco in Terra dei Ricci, to Princess Cattiva in Mezzo Rengo, and to Prince Luciano in Luminescenza, where everyone learns that color can only be brought to Incolore when the kingdom's citizens are allowed to be themselves. Contrary to Prince Ricco's and Princess Cattiva's respective suggestions that happiness is only found in wealth and power, Travelers are reminded that love is what really brings happiness. In Luminescenza, when Prince Amore and the Traveler playing Prince Luciano hold hands for the first time, the beach turns from black and white to a faintly more colored setting, and the music accompanying story moments becomes a bit louder.

Before he can finish the story, Prince Amore must leave to get ready for his wedding to Prince Luciano. Alessi takes it upon themselves to fulfill both their own role and finish out Prince Amore's role in his absence. As the story concludes, Alessi, while playing the role of Prince Amore, blows a kiss to the Traveler playing the role of Prince Luciano and brings upon a group hug of all of the Travelers. In this moment, the entire beach regains its natural color, triumphant music plays, fireworks project onto Alessi's screen, and the Travelers find themselves back in the kingdom of Colorato, where they are now luminescent and ready to attend the Royal Nozze ("Wedding").

Scene 4: Amore and Luciano's Nozze ("Wedding") in the Castle Ballroom

The Travelers are led by the Royal Apprentices to the Castle Ballroom, where there are tables and chairs set up for the wedding ceremony. The most beautiful rainbow decorations adorn the ballroom, a sparkling chandelier hangs down from the ceiling, and a magnificent carpet leads from two large doors in the back of the ballroom to the stunning, shiny wedding arch at the front of the room.

When the organ sounds, the two lovers dressed in their royal Italian wedding garb, PRINCE LUCIANO and Prince Amore, enter from the back and process their way down the ballroom, arm-in-arm. Travelers are handed rainbow flower petals to throw as the pair walks by them. Beautiful Italian wedding music of love and happiness plays during the processional.

Upon arriving to the front of the room, the two princes are met by the KING himself, who has learned to love his son for who he truly is. The King officiates the wedding, and Prince Amore and Prince Luciano seal the marriage with a kiss. At the moment of the kiss, the brightest lights and colors shine throughout the room, and confetti and glitter fall from the ceiling. The Kingdom of Colorato has never been filled with such color and happiness.

The Royal Lovers process once again, hand in hand, out of the ballroom and to the Terrazza, where the Travelers may meet them.

Scene 5: The Royal Meet and Greet on The Terrazza (“Terrace”)

Following the Royal Wedding, Prince Amore and Prince Luciano make their way out to their stone Terrazza (“Terrace”) overlooking the ocean below and greet their royal wedding Travelers. They take this moment to thank the Travelers for coming to the anniversary of Amore Colorato and especially to their wedding. Travelers are given the chance to show off the decorations they created for the celebration and can sing and dance the songs and routines they learned earlier in the Cortile.

Travelers are able to take their photos with the royal couple one group at a time before being ushered back to the Cortile and through the beautiful bridge out of the kingdom of Colorato, where they return to their regular theme park day.
